Orphans’ Sunday is coming up next week (November 12). The following excerpt is from the October, 2017, issue of “The Voice of the Orphans,” a publication our church receives from “Orphan’s Lifeline International.” It tells one of many stories that will encourage all who care about what God cares about:

For more than 12 years Venukaumer and Pilatu have lived at CCIM children’s home. There they have been loved and cared for. There they have laughed and cried and learned and taught. There they have been members of a quilted family that provided them with everything they needed to thrive despite the tragedy that marred their young lives.

Just recently we received a letter from the younger brother (Pilatu).

Pilatu wrote the following: “My name is Pilatu. I and my brother joined CIM children home in 2004. Actually I was so little. Actually I did not know how I joined the home. During the time of the tsunami my mother died. If CCIM children home not there during the time, I and my brother would have been beggars on the street. CCIM is my mother and father...

...I studied from 1st class to 10th class in CCIM. IN 10th class I got 6.2 percentage marks and I desired to study Electrical, I.T.I. for two years. I got high marks and I have been selected as an apprentice in L&T Company. I stayed in home for 13 years. I will be in touch our director often. Thank you for giving me life! - Pilatu”

That is Pilatu’s story. His older brother is also in a polytechnic college at this time and doing very well.

Theirs is just one story of many thousands of stories being written in our children’s homes around the world. Save the stories we write, there won’t be any headlines. There won’t be any news footage covering these stories of triumph over tragedy, but it doesn’t change the importance or value of what is being done thanks to you!

Together we are creating a legacy that consists of rebuilding the broken lives of innocent children who have no one else to care for them. Together we are the last line of defense for these precious little souls. With your help, we will continue to build this legacy to God’s glory so that innocent little lives are not simply erased...gone with the tide...
